The Mutual Influence of Christianity and the Stoic School (Classic Reprint) James Henry Bryant, 2016-06-20 Excerpt from The Mutual Influence of Christianity and the Stoic School Lem We have the testimony of a Pharisee that the sect Of the Pharisees bore a strong affinity to that called Stoic among the Greeks We are led to perceive also from the accounts we have of the free living Sadducees who claimed absolute freedom for the human will that the Epicureans were represented in some degree by them They were sceptics as to the providence of god believed in neither angel nor spirit² they took away all fate and would not allow it to be anything at all nor to have any power over human affairs but put all things entirely into the power Of our own free Willa Both Pharisees and Sadducees though disagreeing in other respects yet were united in their efforts against the spread Of the truth From the earliest preaching of the doctrines of the Gospel the same spirit of self seeking and pride of human nature About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
