Reid,Suzanne L. Hawley,2013-11-27 Perhaps the most common question that a child asks when he or she sees the night sky from a dark site for the first time is How many stars are there This happens to be a question which has exercised the intellectual skills of many astronomers over the course of most of the last century including for the last two decades one of the authors of this text Until recently the most accurate answer was We are not certain but there is a good chance that almost all of them are M dwarfs Within the last three years results from new sky surveys particularly the first deep surveys at near infrared wavelengths have provided a breakthrough in this subject solidifying our census of the lowest mass stars and identifying large numbers of the hitherto almost mythical substellar mass brown dwarfs These extremely low luminosity objects are the central subjects of this book and the subtitle should be interpreted accordingly The expression low mass stars carries a wide range of meanings in the astronomical literature but is most frequently taken to refer to objects with masses comparable with that of the Sun F and G dwarfs and their red giant descendants While this definition is eminently reasonable for the average extragalactic astronomer our discussion centres on M dwarfs with masses of no more than 60% that of the Sun and extends to failed stars objects with insufficient mass to ignite central hydrogen fusion

Astrophysics Is Easy! Michael Inglis, 2014-12-04 Astrophysics is often with some justification regarded as incomprehensible without the use of higher mathematics Consequently many amateur astronomers miss out on some of the most fascinating aspects of the subject Astrophysics Is Easy cuts through the difficult mathematics and explains the basics of astrophysics in accessible terms Using nothing more than plain arithmetic and simple examples the workings of the universe are outlined in a straightforward yet detailed and easy to grasp manner The original edition of the book was written over eight years ago and in that time advances in observational astronomy have led to new and significant changes to the theories of astrophysics The new theories will be reflected in both the new and expanded chapters A unique aspect of this book is that for each topic under discussion an observing list is included so that observers can actually see for themselves the concepts presented stars of the spectral sequence nebulae galaxies even black holes The observing list has been revised and brought up to date in the Second Edition Seeing, second edition John P. Frisby, James V. Stone, 2010-04-02 An accessible yet rigorous and generously illustrated exploration of the computational approach to the study of biological vision Seeing has puzzled scientists and philosophers for centuries and it continues to do so This new edition of a classic text offers an accessible but rigorous introduction to the computational approach to understanding biological visual systems The authors of Seeing taking as their premise David Marr's statement that to understand vision by studying only neurons is like trying to understand bird flight by studying only feathers make use of Marr's three different levels of analysis in the study of vision the computational level the algorithmic level and the hardware implementation level Each chapter applies this approach to a different topic in vision by examining the problems the visual system encounters in interpreting retinal images and the constraints available to solve these problems the algorithms that can realize the solution and the implementation of these algorithms in neurons Seeing has been thoroughly updated for this edition and expanded to more than three times its original length It is designed to lead the reader through the problems of vision from the common but mistaken idea that seeing consists just of making pictures in the brain to the minutiae of how neurons collectively encode the visual features that underpin seeing Although it assumes no prior knowledge of the field some chapters present advanced material This makes it the only textbook suitable for both undergraduate and graduate students that takes a consistently computational perspective offering a firm conceptual basis for tackling the vast literature on vision It covers a wide range of topics including aftereffects the retina receptive fields object recognition brain maps Bayesian perception motion color and stereopsis MatLab code is available on the book's website which includes a simple demonstration of image convolution
