Why TV Is Not Our Fault Eileen R. Meehan, 2005-11-03 For more than five decades we've been told by pundits commentators advertisers scholars and politicians that television is both a window on the world and a mirror reflecting our culture. We've been led to believe that it shows us the world's events through news programs and through entertainment programs reflects the preferences values beliefs and understandings shared by most Americans. We're told that if you don't like what you see on TV don't blame the industry blame yourself. This book dispels the myth that the television industry is just giving viewers the programming they want to see and thus we as viewers are responsible for the existence of shows like Fear Factor and yet another Survivor. In fact Eileen Meehan explains viewers exert no demand in the market for ratings advertising slots program production or telecasting. She also counters the idea that TV programs reflect our culture directly. Introducing us to the political economy of television Meehan covers programming corporate strategies advertising the misnomer of competition among networks and organizations that seek more industry accountability. She tells us why TV isn't our fault_ and who's really to blame.

Hollywood Online Ian London, 2024-03-07 Hollywood Online provides a historical account of motion picture websites from 1993 to 2008 and their marketing function as industrial advertisements for video and other media in the digital age. The Blair Witch Project is the most important example of online film promotion in cinema history. Over the last thirty years only a small number of major and independent distributors have converted internet created buzz into box office revenues with similar levels of success. Yet readings of how the film's internet campaign broke new ground in the summer of 1999 tend to minimize overlook or ignore the significance of other online film promotions. Similarly claims that Blair initiated a cycle of imitators have been repeated in film publications and academic studies for more than two decades. This book challenges three major narratives in studies about online film.

marketing Hollywood's major studios and independents had no significant relationship to the internet in the 1990s online film promotions only took off after 1999 because of Blair and Hollywood cashed in by initiating a cycle of imitators and scaling up corporate activities online Hollywood Online tests these assumptions by exploring internet marketing up to and including the film's success online Pre Blair 1993-9 then by examining the period immediately after Blair Post Blair 2000-8 which broadly coincides with the rise and decline of DVD as well as the emergence of the social media sites MySpace Facebook and Twitter
