The Stars Are Not Enough Joseph C. Hermanowicz, 1998-10-15 Based on sixty interviews with physicists at universities across the United States The Stars are Not Enough offers a detailed and intimate account of the worlds in which scientists work Joseph C Hermanowicz looks at a range of scientists from young graduate students to older professionals well into their careers The result is a colorful portrait of a profession and its diverse cast of characters These deeply personal narratives reveal dreams of fame and glory in which scientists confess their ambitions of becoming the next Newton or Einstein However these scientists also discuss the meaning of success and failure We hear their stories of aspiration and anxiety disappointment and tragedy hope and achievement we are privy to their doubts and to what they consider to be their limitations and weaknesses As the scientists age in their professions the specter of failure often visits them and they have to accept something less than scientific immortality or even the Nobel Prize Ultimately these stories give us more than an inside look at the details of careers in science they also examine ambition by uncovering the forces that drive people in their professions and by describing how these forces persist or fade over time Ambition for greatness often ignites a career and often sustains it Yet as Hermanowicz's study reveals greatness eludes nearly all people in their heroic quests for extraordinary achievement The Stars Are Not Enough offers a fascinating account that will appeal to anyone interested in how people's dreams blossom and evolve

Lives in Science Joseph C. Hermanowicz, 2010-04-15 What can we learn when we follow people over the years and across the course of their professional lives Joseph C Hermanowicz asks this question specifically about scientists and answers it here by tracking fifty five physicists through different stages of their careers at a variety of universities across the country He explores these scientists shifting perceptions of their jobs to uncover the meanings they invest in their work when and where they find satisfaction how they succeed and fail and how the rhythms of their work change as they age His candid interviews with his subjects meanwhile shed light on the ways career goals are and are not met on the frustrations of the academic profession and on how one deals with the boredom and stagnation that can set in once one is established An in depth study of American higher education professionals eloquently told through their own words Hermanowicz s keen analysis of how institutions shape careers will appeal to anyone interested in life in academia      The American Academic Profession Joseph C.

light on the structures that permit elite departments to define categories and impose legitimate scientific definitions to which the non elite must adhere With a focus on two scientific disciplines the author shows how the translation of objective structures into mental structures establishes a relationship of power with regard to the definition of scientific categories thus determining access to resources and opportunities to participate and move within the academic field A study of the unequal intrusion of economic logics into the academic domain this volume will appeal to scholars policy makers and institutional leaders with interests in higher education inequality within science academic careers power relationships and competition in the academy

Failing Families, Failing Science Elaine Ecklund, 2016-08-30 Work life in academia might sound like a dream summers off year long sabbaticals the opportunity to switch between classroom teaching and research Yet when it comes to the sciences life at the top U S research universities is hardly idyllic Based on surveys of over 2 000 junior and senior scientists both male and female as well as in depth interviews Failing Families Failing Science examines how the rigors of a career in academic science makes it especially difficult to balance family and work Ecklund and Lincoln paint a nuanced picture that illuminates how gender individual choices and university and science infrastructures all play a role in shaping science careers and how science careers in turn shape family life They argue that both men and women face difficulties though differently in managing career and family While women are hit harder by the pressures of elite academic science the institution of science and academic science in particular is not accommodating possibly not even compatible for either women or men who want to raise families Perhaps most importantly their research reveals that early career academic scientists struggle considerably with balancing their work and family lives This struggle may prevent these young scientists from pursuing positions at top research universities or further pursuing academic science at all a circumstance that comes at great cost to our national science infrastructure In an era when advanced scientific research and education is more important than ever Failing Families Failing Science presents a compelling inside look at the world of the university scientists who make it possible and what universities and national science bodies can do to make a difference in their lives
