INTRODUCTION: A NEW ERA FOR SPATIAL ARCHAEOLOGY WITH THE VTOL ADVENT AND THE NEED FOR LIDAR GUIDELINES

The paper is a research compendium on how Spatial Archaeology can benefit from LiDAR technology. Specifically, we refer to VTOL fixed-wing UAV LiDAR applied in Mesoamerica. In many European countries and the USA, the cartographic database of the entire national territory (Harding et al., 2008; Stoker et al., 2014) has been available on the Internet for many years, albeit at medium resolution. In Mesoamerica, from Chase's studies and surveys from the 2000s to the present, (Chase et al., 2014, 2020; Ebert, 2016a, 2016b; Caracol Archaeological Project, 2020, June 12) a long tradition of LiDAR investigation has yielded unexpected, incredible knowledge about the ancient Maya civilization. Although LiDAR has exploded in popularity, there is still a lack of systematic overview of how it has contributed to archaeological theory, especially at the landscape scale of spatial archaeology and from the perspective of digital application. Today, researchers acknowledge the need for specific LiDAR guidelines (European Archaeological Council: EAC, Eac site, (n.d.)), which are still expected, while other geospatial techniques guidelines are already available, such as magnetometers or ground-penetrating radar (Schmidt et al., 2015). However, universities, departments, and international bodies are on the way and understand the importance of having common classification standards (Garstka, 2020) and metadata and paradata (Wise & Miller, 1997) to be shared in a network for digital archaeology and also on a global scale. Therefore, case studies and best practices are useful to demonstrate the magical utility of this technology that opens the field to multidisciplinary and a new era of archaeological research (Barceló, 2016, 2017).

BACKGROUND: LIDAR UTILIZATION

In many countries, LiDAR data topography is already available on the web (Kissling et al., 2022; Organismo Autónomo Centro Nacional de Información Geográfica, n.d.); in others, it is available on request, so that a significant part of the world is openly accessible. The main reason for this choice by governments is the

Spatial Archaeology:

Spatial Analysis in Archaeology Ian Hodder, Clive Orton, 1976-10-14 This 1976 text is a pioneering study in the applications to archaeology of modern statistical and quantitative techniques. The authors show how these techniques when sensitively employed can dramatically extend and refine the information presented in distribution maps and other analyses of spatial relationships. Techniques of interpretation by inspection can now be made more powerful and rigorous at the same time interest has turned from the examination of such sites and artefacts as things to the spatial relationships between such things, their relationships to one another and to landscape features, soils and other resources. This book was the first to apply the available techniques systematically to the special problems and interests of archaeologists. It also demonstrates to geographers and other social scientists who may be familiar with analogous applications in their own fields the exciting interdisciplinary developments this facilitates for example in studies of exchange networks, trade and settlement patterns and cultural history.

Process and Meaning in Spatial Archaeology Eric Jones, John Creese, 2017-01-21 Process and Meaning in Spatial Archaeology examines Northern Iroquoian archaeology through various lenses at multiple spatial levels including individual households, village constructions, relationships between villages in a local region and relationships between various Iroquoian nations and their territorial homelands. The volume includes scholars and scholarship from both sides of the US/Canadian border presenting a contextualized analysis of settlement and landscape for a broad range of past Northern Iroquoian societies. The research in this volume represents a new wave of spatial research exploring beyond settlement patterning to the process and the meaning behind spatial arrangement of past communities and people and describes new approaches being used for better understanding of past Northern Iroquoian societies. Addressing topics ranging from household taskscapes and gender relations to bioarchaeology and social network analysis, Process and Meaning in Spatial Archaeology demonstrates the vitality of current archaeological research into ancestral Northern Iroquoian societies and its growing contribution to wider debates in North American archaeology. This cutting edge research will be of interest to archaeologists globally as well as academics and graduate students studying Northern Iroquoian societies and cultures geography and spatial analysis Contributors Kathleen M S Allen Jennifer A Birch William Engelbrecht Crystal Forrest John P Hart Sandra Katz Robert H Pihl Aleksandra Pradzynski Erin C Rodriguez Dean R Snow Ronald F Williamson Rob Wojtowicz

Archaeological Spatial Analysis Mark Gillings, Piraye Hacıgüzeller, Gary Lock, 2020-01-16 Effective spatial analysis is an essential element of archaeological research this book is a unique guide to choosing the appropriate technique applying it correctly and understanding its implications both theoretically and practically Focusing upon the key techniques used in archaeological spatial analysis this book provides the authoritative yet accessible methodological guide to the subject which has thus far been missing from the corpus Each chapter tackles a specific technique or application area and follows a clear and coherent structure First is a richly referenced introduction to the particular technique followed by a detailed description of the methodology then an archaeological case study to illustrate the application of the technique and conclusions that point to the implications and potential of the technique within archaeology The book is designed to function as the main textbook for archaeological spatial analysis courses at undergraduate and post graduate level while its user friendly structure makes it also suitable for self learning by archaeology students as well as researchers and professionals Spatial Archaeology

David L. Clarke, 1977 Beyond the Map Gary R. Lock, 2000 This set of papers by European and North American archaeologists explore the interface between new spatial technologies and areas of theoretical concern in spatial archaeology Differing aspects of landscape such as vision perception and movement are explored through a series of case studies that focus on how spatial technologies can influence archaeological interpretation and to what extent these new technologies can be manipulated to take us beyond 2 dimensional maps Individual site based analyses and new applications of predictive modelling are also presented and assessed together with the wider questions of spatial technologies within heritage management Spatial Technology and Archaeology David Wheatley, Mark Gillings, 2003-09-02 Geographical Information Systems GIS and related spatial technologies have a new and powerful role to play in archaeological interpretation Beginning with a conceptual approach to the representation of space adopted by GIS this book examines spatial databases the acquisition and compilation of data the analytical compilation of data the analytical functionality of GIS and the creation and utilization of critical foundation data layers such as the Digital Elevation Model DEM The ways in which GIS can most usefully facilitate archaeological analysis and interpretation are then explored particularly as a tool for the management of archaeological resources Formal analysis of archaeological material and the use of trend surface contouring and interpolation procedures are considered along with predictive modeling analysis of visibility and intervisibility Finally there is a discussion of leading edge issues including three dimensional GIS object oriented GIS the relationship between GIS and Virtual Reality technologies and the integration of GIS with distributed systems and the Internet The approach is light and technical detail is kept to a minimum recognizing that most readers are simply interested in using GIS effectively The text is carefully illustrated with worked case studies using archaeological data Spatial Technology and Archaeology provides a single reference source for archaeologists students professionals and academics in archaeology as well as those in anthropology and related disciplines Space and Spatial Analysis in Archaeology University of Calgary. Archaeological Association. Conference, Elizabeth C.
