Egophoricity Simeon Floyd, Elisabeth Norcliffe, Lila San Roque, 2018-04-15 Egophoricity refers to the grammaticalised encoding of personal knowledge or involvement of a conscious self in a represented event or situation Most typically a marker that is egophoric is found with first person subjects in declarative sentences and with second person subjects in interrogative sentences This person sensitivity reflects the fact that speakers generally know most about their own affairs while in questions this epistemic authority typically shifts to the addressee First described for Tibeto Burman languages egophoric like patterns have now been documented in a number of other regions around the world including languages of Western China the Andean region of South America the Caucasus Papua New Guinea and elsewhere This book is a first attempt to place detailed descriptions of this understudied grammatical category side by side and to add to the cross linguistic picture of how ideas of self and other are encoded and projected in language The diverse but conceptually related egophoric phenomena described in its chapters provide fascinating case studies for how structural patterns in morphosyntax are forged under intersubjective interactional pressures as we link elements of our speech to our speech situation

The Pragmatics of Modals in Shakespeare Minako Nakayasu, 2009 Modals and related phenomena are without doubt one of the most complicated issues in the grammar of language This study provides a reappraisal of the modals in Shakespeare's language from the pragmatic viewpoint both micropragmatic and macropragmatic The material selected for analysis are modals SHALL SHOULD WILL WOULD and their contracted forms Micropragmatic aspects such as speech acts seem relatively easily accessible to historical researchers however this study moves further into the macropragmatic dimensions of language use than the earlier ones and covers politeness dialogue and discourse analysis

Focus and Background in Romance Languages Andreas Dufter, Daniel Jacob, 2009-06-18 Focus background structure has taken center stage in much current theorizing about sentence prosody syntax and semantics However both the inventory of focus expressions found cross linguistically and the interpretive consequences associated with each of these continue to be insufficiently described This volume aims at providing new observations on the availability and the use of focus markings in Romance languages In doing so it documents the plurality of research on focus in Spanish Portuguese French Italian and Romanian Topics covered include constituent fronting and clefting the position of subjects and focus particles clitic doubling of objects and information packaging in complex sentences In addition some contributions explore focus background structure from acquisitional and diachronic angles while others adopt a comparative perspective studying differences between individual Romance and Germanic languages Therefore this volume is of interest to a broad audience within linguistics including syntacticians semanticists and historical linguists

Territory of Information Akio Kamio, 1997-01-01 Most higher animals are said to be territorial as a huge amount of work in ethology has made it clear Human beings are no exceptions They tend to occupy a certain space around them where they claim their own presence and exclude others quite naturally If territory is so prevalent among higher animals including humans then isn't it possible to observe its manifestations in aspects of human language Territory of Information starts from this fundamental question and attempts to demonstrate the key function of the concept of territory in the informational structure and syntax of natural language. It offers an analysis of English, Japanese and Chinese in terms of territory and shows its fundamental importance in the interface of information and syntax in these languages. Moreover, it argues that the concept of territory plays a major role in the evidentiality of a number of languages and in the linguistic structure of politeness. It also makes much reference to discourse and conversational analysis. Thus, this is a book which might interest readers concerned with pragmatics in general, the relationship between informational structure and syntax, evidentiality, politeness, discourse analysis and conversational analysis.

The Oxford Handbook of Names and Naming Carole Hough, 2016-05-03. In this handbook, scholars from around the world offer an up-to-date account of the state of the art in different areas of onomastics in a format that is both useful to specialists in related fields and accessible to the general reader. Since Ancient Greece, names have been regarded as central to the study of language, and this has continued to be a major theme of both philosophical and linguistic enquiry throughout the history of Western thought. The investigation of name origins is more recent, as is the study of names in literature. Relatively new is the study of names in society, which draws on techniques from sociolinguistics and has gradually been gathering momentum over the last few decades. The structure of this volume reflects the emergence of the main branches of name studies in roughly chronological order. The first Part focuses on name theory and outlines key issues about the role of names in language, focusing on grammar, meaning and discourse. Parts II and III deal with the study of place names and personal names respectively, while Part IV outlines contrasting approaches to the study of names in literature with case studies from different languages and time periods. Part V explores the field of socio-onomastics with chapters relating to the names of people, places and commercial products. Part VI then examines the interdisciplinary nature of name studies before the concluding Part presents a selection of animate and inanimate referents ranging from aircraft to animals and explains the naming strategies adopted for them.
