Size and Character of Grains of Nonmetallic Mineral Fillers William Melvin Weigel, 1924 An Introduction to the Study of Fabrics of Geological Bodies Bruno Sander, 2013-10-22 An Introduction to the Study of Fabrics of Geological Bodies introduces the reader to the method of fabric studies in accordance with the principles of symmetrology with emphasis on the link between morphological and functional fabrics Topics covered include affine and non affine movement pictures movement and symmetry of tectonic deformation tectonics and fluid mechanics and movement and symmetry of apposition Some examples of the use and definition of fabric studies are presented This book is divided into two parts and begins with an overview of the concepts and objectives of fabric studies paying particular attention to symmetry and rhythm in morphological and functional fabrics the movement picture of affine deformations and non affine deformation by gliding on a single set of planes The discussion then turns to the distribution of planar and linear parallel fabrics in geological bodies constructive restoration of earlier geometry of tectonic fabrics tectonics of intrusives with a high susceptibility to componental movement and mechanical deformation and metamorphism of rocks The general characteristics of grain fabrics are also described This monograph will be a useful resource for geologists and those working in the fields of mineralogy and petrography A Comparison Study of NTB and Medium Lantern Slide Emulsions for Autoradiographs George A. Boyd, 1949 The grain speed of Eastman NTB and medium lantern slide emulsions were compared by exposing to a known number of I 131 beta particles Grains were counted On the basis of this work and unpublished work by the Eastman Kodak Research Laboratories an I 131 beta particle has equal probability of rendering a grain developable in the present NTB emulsions as in the medium lantern slide even though the latter are larger The NTB fog is low and resolution high
