Connecticut which passes through the center in a broad and fertile valley in its upper course and in a narrow valley hemmed in by highlands below Portland and the Housatonic in the western part with a narrow and much more mountainous valley Apparently the Connecticut and upper Housatonic valleys and the southern coast line are highways for the migration of our birds in spring and the coast line certainly is in fall but our information on this point is at present very incomplete The woodland consists chiefly of deciduous trees though hemlocks and cedars are common and groves of white pine and spruce still exist in the northwestern portion Shut off from the ocean by Long Island strictly pelagic birds are seldom found in Connecticut but for many other species it is particularly fitted as regards climate and topography About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
