The Great Cat and Dog Massacre Hilda Kean, 2017-03-14 In 1939 400 000 cats and dogs were massacred in Britain their corpses heaped up outside veterinarians offices Fear of the imminent German blitz led the government to urge pet owners to spare their animal companions so that they would not suffer in the bombing raids Hilda Kean s gripping narrative of this little known event includes tales of smuggling pets into bomb shelters trading bits of cat food on the black market and preemptively killing thousands of pets at the start of the war to save the food supplies in England Kean is able to show vividly how pets were an important part of British wartime experience She pays close attention to animals both symbolic and actual arguing that after the pet massacre human animal bonds became stronger and closer In the process of telling this history Kean necessarily complicates the picture of World War II as the good war fought by a nation of good animal loving people Her close use of primary materials diaries personal sources contemporary newspapers collective public reports on daily life etc gives palpable reality to the animals and their fate at this time This forgotten aspect of Britain s history makes us rethink accepted accounts of the War and shows the ways in which animal and human histories are inextricably linked We are also constrained to rethink our assumptions about ourselves and the animals with whom we share our homes
