Representation of Places Peter Bosselmann, 1998-03-21 People live in cities and experience them firsthand while urban designers explain cities conceptually In Representation of Places Peter Bosselmann takes on the challenging question of how designers can communicate the changes they envision in order that the rest of us adequately understand how those changes will affect our lives New modes of imaging technology from two dimensional maps charts and diagrams to computer models allow professionals to explain their designs more clearly than ever before Although architects and planners know how to read these representations few outside the profession can interpret them let alone understand what it would be like to walk along the streets such representations describe Yet decisions on what gets built are significantly influenced by these very representations A portion of Bosselmann's book is based on innovative experiments conducted at the University of California Berkeley's Visual Simulation Laboratory In a section titled The City in the Laboratory he discusses how visual simulation was applied to projects in New York City San Francisco and Toronto The concerns that Bosselmann addresses have an impact on large segments of society and lay readers as well as professionals will find much that is useful in his timely accessibly written book
