survey of the concept of matter but rather an effort to enumerate the images of matter in Gogol's texts and to specify the rules of their construction. The trajectory of the book is directed by movement from Gogol to Gogol. Its major assumption is that Gogol successfully develops a language for grasping the Neoplatonic concept of matter and subsequently rejects it, abandoning literature. Since then the Gogolian form, sic of the image of a sheer negation of form, has recurred frequently in Russian literature. Yet the direction of the movement is always towards Gogol. Somewhere at the margin of this circular trajectory one can inscribe a Polish writer Witold Gombrowicz, who established one hundred years later a similar rhythm governing Polish literature from Gombrowicz to Gombrowicz. Manual of Mental and Physical Tests: Complex processes Guy Montrose Whipple, 1915

Masonry Construction C.R. Calladine, 2013-03-09 This volume contains eight contributions on the common theme of masonry construction. The publication coincides with the retirement of Dr Jacques Heyman from his Professorship of Engineering in the University of Cambridge and Headship of the University's Engineering Department. It is entirely appropriate to have a collection of papers in honour of Professor Heyman at this time for he has made signal contributions to our understanding of masonry construction over the past thirty years or so. It is no exaggeration to say that he has radically changed the way in which engineers think about masonry structures, particularly in relation to the old ecclesiastical buildings and bridges. Indeed it is hard to imagine what this subject would be like today in the absence of Professor Heyman's seminal papers. History of sculpture, tr. by F.E. Bunnett Wilhelm Lübke, 1872
