Military Industry and Regional Defense Policy Timothy D. Hoyt, 2017-07-05 Military Industry and Regional Defense Policy re examines military industrialization in the developing world focusing on policy making in producer states and the impact of security perceptions on such policy making Timothy D Hoyt reassesses the role of regional state sub systems in international relations and recent historical studies of international technology and arms transfers Looking at Israel Iraq and India the three most powerful regional powers in the Cold War era he presents an expert analysis of the three sided phenomena of the regional hegemony the regional competitor and the small over achiever This new book breaks away from existing literature on military industries in the developing world which has focused on their economic and development costs and benefits These past studies have used primitive methodologies that focus on the production of complete weapons systems a misleading gauge in a world of growing international defense cooperation They have also ignored empirical evidence of the impact of local military industrial production on Cold War regional conflict and of the defence planning and concerns that drove development of indigenous military industries in key regional powers This new text delivers an incisive new perspective

Inadvertent Nuclear War Hå. Wiberg, I.D. Petersen, P. Smoker, 2013-10-22 Since the dramatic end of the Pacific War in 1945 the threat of nuclear war has exercised the minds of many Initial fears concerned the risk that a political crisis between the Superpowers would escalate through military confrontation into a calculated nuclear war Another scenario pictured a new Hitler commanding a nuclear capable state prepared to use such weapons irrationally possibly sparking a catalytic nuclear war between the major Powers More recently attention has shifted towards the risk of the accidental release of nuclear weapons While the risk of intentional conflict between the major Powers has lessened the arsenals have only been marginally reduced leaving the possibility of accidental release as perhaps the most threatening case Inadvertent Nuclear War presents the risk in terms of the reliability and instability of the human and technical systems governing release with contributions ranging from the engineering of computer software to the psychology of the chain of command As Dr Wiberg states in his introduction No known technical construction human being or social organization is absolutely failsafe Data
