Social Policies For The Elderly In The Third World:

Aging and Adult Development in the Developing World Frank E. Eyetsemitan, James T. Gire, 2003-02-28 Most studies of human development in developing societies have focused on the childhood stage and in a few cases exploration has extended up to adolescence since this age group represents about half the population in developing societies The developed world however is experiencing a surge in the elderly population and this has spurred its study There is growing recognition that studies are needed in order to understand aging in all contexts and to discover how the experience may differ in developing and developed societies In this book the authors discuss the appropriateness or inappropriateness of applying Western theories and perspectives to studies of aging in the developing world The present study critically examines the major theories in the area of aging and adult development covering such domains as the physical psychological and social aspects of aging death and dying and social and public policies Applying the concepts of individualism and collectivism as well as the global and environmental dimensions of the developing world the authors have earmarked the theories that seem suitable only to the developed world and those that appear to be universally relevant Aging in the Third World Kevin G. Kinsella, 1988

The International Handbook on Aging Erdman P. Palmore, Frank Whittington, Suzanne

Kunkel,2009-10-27 The United Nations World Assembly on Aging has made advancing health and well being into old age a worldwide call for action And this text at hand shows us what researchers worldwide are doing to answer that call Here three of America s most esteemed experts on aging lead a global team of contributors each an expert in his or her country to show us what the top challenges of each nation are and what top research is being done there to meet those While we cannot predict with absolute certainty all of the issues that will arise over the next 20 years we can anticipate some and we must start now to prepare for these challenges an expert from the U S Department of Health and Human Services warned at a recent UN World Assembly on Aging Needed response to the global population shift is not just the responsibility of governments but will be a product of wise long term decisions made by individuals and societies she explained In most nations globally populations are graying and the number of people aged 65 and older is vastly increasing creating a larger segment of senior citizens than the world has ever before seen Across human history the elderly accounted for no more than 3 percent of the world population By the year 2030 the elderly are expected to make up about 25 percent of the world population And while longevity is of course seen as a great success longer lifespan for such masses also creates dilemmas For example the incidence of dementia has already increased significantly with an 11 fold increase in people aged 65 and older in the US since the turn of the century and a similar increase in aged people in Scotland has researchers there scrambling to find treatments for what they expect will be a 75 percent increase in dementia over the next 25 years Chronic diseases that come with aging are already taxing health care systems in the US and around the world to Japan with most experts aware their current health systems would be overrun and lack enough staff and facilities to handle the needs of an elderly population multiplying largely in the coming two decades Increases in psychological issues such as dealing with the depression often striking aged people are impending too as are social issues such as how families and public policies will deal with the changing shape of the family

Senior Citizens of India S. Irudaya Rajan,Udaya S. Mishra,2020-09-08 This book provides an overview of multiple facets of ageing and its evolving dynamics in various Indian states It elaborates on key dimensions like health dependence and disability as well as living arrangements for the elderly Drawing on information from National Sample Surveys to offer readers a broader and richer understanding of the evolving demographic reality in India the book addresses a range of detailed policies and programmes for the elderly in India Given its scope the book is essential reading for students and researchers in the fields of sociology demography economics and development studies It also offers a valuable reference guide for anyone engaged in planning and policy formulation for social security welfare of the aged or mainstreaming ageing concerns

Advancing Long-Term Care Policy and Research in China Zhanlian Feng,Bei Wu,2025-08-06 Population aging and rapid socioeconomic changes are weakening family based elder care while escalating the needs for long term care services for older adults in China This book presents insightful analysis and research findings on a wide range of policy relevant issues related to long term care for older adults in China China s population is aging at an unprecedented pace Currently older Chinese adults aged 65 and over account for approximately 15% or 208 million of the total population a figure projected to exceed 30% or 390 million by 2050 Rapid demographic and socioeconomic changes in China are weakening traditional family based elder care while increasing the demand for long term care services This book features a collection of studies that provides timely analyses and fresh insights into a wide range of policy relevant topics related to long term care for older adults in China These topics are explored in the volume s nine chapters organized under four main themes migration caregiving and elder care challenges long term care service users frontline workers and workforce challenges unmet needs across the care continuum in healthcare long term care and end of life care and long term care financing Grounded in a thoughtful analysis of the best available empirical data and employing rigorous and cutting edge research methods the findings from these studies contribute to building scientific evidence where it is lacking and support evidence informed long term care policymaking and practice to address the mounting challenges of population aging in China This book was originally published as a special issue of the Journal of Aging Social Policy Social Policies for the Elderly in the Third World Martin Tracy,1991-01-30 This book introduces a problem solving model to cross national studies of social programs for the elderly in economically developing nations the Third World a term that is used here only as a designation of unspecified relatively lower levels of industrial and economic development Current models of cross national analysis tend to focus on theory testing and description they fail to provide the practical information that indigenous policymakers need to decide whether another nation s policy program or provision is appropriate to their own country
