Social Protest And Policy Change Ecology Antinuclear And Peace Movements In Comparative Perspective:

Social Protest and Policy Change Marco Giugni, 2004-06-10 While movement activists spend much of their time and energy trying to change the world and we think that social movements often matter our theoretical and empirical knowledge in this field is still relatively poor Social Protest and Policy Change offers a systematic and empirically grounded analysis of the impact of three major contemporary movements on public policy Following a comparative and historical perspective the author argues that the policy impact of social movements is facilitated by the presence of favorable political opportunity structures and more precisely by the presence of institutional allies among the elites and by a favorable public opinion Furthermore the very content of the movements demands also plays a role insofar as the power holders are more willing to make concessions on certain issues than on others On the basis of a historical overview of the mobilization of ecology antinuclear and peace movements in the United States Italy and Switzerland and using a unique body of original data the book presents the results of time series analyses showing the joint effect of protest political alliances and shifts in public opinion for movements that do not address issues that pose too serious a threat to the power holders policies have been brought to the fore of national and regional politics The state is undoubtedly the most important actor in the process of memory production and along with conservative legislators and the grass root revisionist movement there has been a consistent trend towards denying or undermining the existing acknowledgments of responsibility for Japan's wartime past However to fully comprehend war memory in Japan due attention must be paid to competing discourses that demand an alternative view and only then can the complexity of Japanese war memory and attitudes towards the legacies of the Asia Pacific war be understood The Politics of War Memory in Japan examines the involvement of five civil society actors in the struggle over remembering and addressing the wartime past in Japan today In studying progressive war memory activists it quickly becomes clear that the apologia by conservative politicians cannot be treated as representative of the opinion of the majority of the Japanese public Indeed this book seeks to remedy the disparity between studies devoted to the official level of addressing the history issue and the grass root historical revisionist movement on the one side and progressive activism on the other Furthermore it contributes to scholarly debates on the state of civil society in Japan challenging the characterisation of Japanese civil society as a depoliticised space by demonstrating a more contentious side of civil society activism Drawing important new empirical research this book will be of huge interest to students and scholars of Japanese civil society Japanese politics Japanese history and memory in Japan

Contentious Agency and Natural Resource Politics

Markus Kröger, 2013-11-26 The looming depletion of non renewable resources has increased the global land grab in the past decade So far however the question of how and when people can influence economic outcomes has received little attention in the study of social movements Based on in depth ethnographic field research since 2003 in the industrial forestry expansion frontiers in Brazil and elsewhere in the global South this book presents a novel theory to explain how the interaction between resistance companies and the state determines investment outcomes The promotion of contentious agency by organizing and politicizing campaigning protesting networking and engaging in state and corporate remediated politics whilst maintaining autonomy is central to explaining how impacted people influence resource flows and block or slow projects they deem harmful to their livelihoods and the environment. The conflicts between globalizing paper and pulp corporations and the landless peasants indigenous communities and other parties with alternative projects for the planet's future are studied to illustrate how a great transformation can be built upon progressive counter movements. This systematic comparison of several cases illustrates the broader principles and problems endemic to the global political economy. Contentious Agency and Natural Resource Politics will be of strong interest to students and scholars of international relations, international political economy, environmental studies, environmental politics, sociology and social movement studies.

An examination of anti water privatization movements in the United States and Canada that explores the interplay of the local and the global. Attempts by local governments to privatize water services have met with furious opposition. Activists argue that to give private companies control of the water supply is to turn water from a common resource into a marketized commodity. Moreover, to cede local power to a global corporation puts communities at the center of controversies over economic globalization. In Contested Water Joanna Robinson examines local social movement organizing against water privatization, looking closely at battles for control of local water services in Stockton, California and Vancouver, British Columbia. The movements in these two communities had different trajectories, used different tactics and experienced different outcomes. Robinson analyzes the factors that shaped these two struggles. Drawing on extensive interviews with movement actors, political leaders and policymakers and detailed analysis of textual material, Robinson shows that the successful campaign in Vancouver drew on tactics, opportunities and narratives from the broader antiglobalization movement, with activists emphasizing the threats to local democracy and accountability; the less successful movement in Stockton centered on a ballot initiative that was made meaningless by a pre-emptive city council vote. Robinson finds that global forces are reshaping local movements, particularly those that oppose neoliberal reforms at the municipal level. She argues that anti water privatization movements that link local and international concerns and build wide ranging coalitions at local and global levels offer an effective way to counter economic globalization. Successful challenges to globalization will not necessarily come from transnational movements but rather from movements that are connected globally but rooted in local communities.
