When the topic of international justice did arise discussion rarely got beyond recommendations about how nations could avoid war as well as suggestions about when a declaration of war was morally justifiable and what sorts of methods might be used in the course of a justifiable war the topics of so called just war theory Such is no longer the case To be sure just war theory is reaching greater states of sophistication much of it focused around Michael Walzer's book Just and Unjust Wars Excerpts from Walzer's book appear here in Part Two along with a set of newly written chapters that deal with issues arising from the use of violence among nations The topics of these chapters are foreign interventionism and states rights deterrence and the threat of nuclear reprisal and terrorism But issues of international justice other than just war theory have been discussed by an ever increasing group of twentieth century scholars These issues deal with what might be called for lack of a better term distributive justice which concerns the distribution of the world's natural resources and the goods produced by laborers across the world as well as the duties rights and liberties possessed by individuals How such items ought to be distributed within nation states has been discussed extensively by social and political philosophers Only in recent years has any attention been paid to the proper distribution of goods internationally The chapters in Part One all do so With one exception all of these chapters are written for this volume The exception is an excerpt from Charles Beitz's book Political Theory and International Relations Part Three of which is reproduced here almost in its entirety The other chapters in this part are devoted to the topics of justice and the distribution of the world's resources the obligation to assist the needy the responsibilities of international corporations and justice and the global environment Top Ten Global Justice Law

Kerry Carrington, 2014-10-17 In this book Kerry Carrington takes a bold critical and reflexive approach to understanding the global divisions and inequalities that shape distinctive patterns of gender and crime The book argues that in order for feminist criminology to enhance its conceptual and political relevance in the twenty first century bold new directions in scholarship on gender crime and global justice are required that also take into account global divisions and inequalities Issues explored in the book include the forced marriage of child brides female genital mutilation feminicide honour crimes rape and domestic violence and the systemic denial of female rights justified by religion custom or culture It also explores rising rates of violence recorded for women offenders globally and their increasing participation in terrorism as well as troubling male on male violence in anomic spaces cultivated by globalising forces Feminism and Global Justice argues that the world needs feminism more than ever to address systemic culturally shaped and diverse forms of injustice experienced by

of how human rights can be better protected in a better world There is a unique case study of cooperative security in the Greater Black Sea Area by one of the few experts on the politics of this region It will be read and appreciated by those who need to understand how modern international law and diplomacy really work Journalists media commentators human rights NGOs aid agencies diplomats and government officials need the information in this Book
