

Week 2 - DQ 3 - Chapter 3 Culture and Interpersonal Communication

Watch Momondo: The DNA Journey and then answer the following questions. I have provided the link below. If you have trouble opening it, you can copy and paste the link into YouTube or Google and it should work or simply type in Google or YouTube 'Momondo: The DNA Journey' and the video should come up for you to view. The length of the video is 5:16.

1. Individuals identify different cultures that they would not want to be from. Why are some of the people interviewed ethnocentric?
2. After having their DNA analyzed, the participants learned that their ancestry was more complex than they first thought. Do you agree that "extremism" and prejudice would be reduced if everyone knew their ancestry and shared heritage? Why or why not?
3. The tag line of the video is "an open world begins with an open mind." How does this relate to intercultural competence?

I think that some of the people who were interviewed are ethnocentric due to two possible reasons. I mean that there are some cases where there is a situation where two different cultures are involved in a conflict or a problem that causes people from each culture to have an ethnocentric view toward the other. An example of this could be India and Pakistan, two countries that have been in conflict for a long time. This caused Pakistanis and Indians to have ethnocentric thinking towards the culture of the other country.

The second reason may be due to misinformation, many times we tend to judge other cultures without even taking the time to know what the culture represents. Also, we often get carried away by opinions or comments regarding another culture, causing us to adopt an ethnocentric way of thinking toward other cultures.

Surely if each one of us knew our heritage, prejudices and extremism would be reduced. This would be because each person would realize that it is impossible to have a 100% pure heritage and that in many cases our heritage is also linked to other cultures that we may not know or like. Learning about our heritage would allow us to be people more motivated to learn about the different cultures we belong to and be more tolerant towards the other cultures we don't like since we may also belong to them.

The slogan "an open world begins with an open mind" is related to intercultural competence because in order to be able to comment on a culture it is important to have a certain level of knowledge about it, so as not to misinform about that culture. It is important to have a certain level of knowledge about a culture in order not to
