It is important that the training interventions are evidence-based and that the training is conducted through peer teaching. The research also provides for the control of the training, and we identify the mechanisms underlying the finding through learning policies. Improving the training intervention can be done through a number of changes or further on the field. We might choose to add and use children to support the teaching efforts and improve the learning environment for all. We should also look at the place of gender in the training through an intersectional lens and address the intersection of gender and other factors in the training intervention.

It is to state that training activities should be scheduled so that they require no change in the use of time spent getting to bed that is more than 10 min.

It's important for the success of your event efforts to measure if you're making mistakes. To capture any learning opportunities, you can ask guests to fill out a survey, interview staff about the event or do a post-mortem debriefing with a staff line of authority. Learning Intentions and Success Criteria

When children understand what they are learning, and what is expected of them, they learn best.

The terms 'Learning intentions' and 'Success Criteria' can be intimidating and confusing but understanding them is vitally important when working in an Early Learning and Childcare setting. Learning intentions and success criteria will help your children understand both what they are learning and how to succeed.

They need both learning intentions and success criteria to develop, consolidate and achieve new knowledge. This guide will help you understand how to create learning intentions and success criteria in order to support your children and monitor their progress.

Learning Intention

(Sometimes known as learning objectives, aims, learning outcomes, goals, 'we are learning to...' statements etc).

Learning intentions should describe what you would like children to learn, not what they should be able to do.

Learning situations help children focus on the aim of the learning experience, keep the activities relevant to the them and support their understanding. They are not about what they are doing but what they are learning.

When writing learning objectives, you should use a language that focuses on what you would like the children to know, understand or be able to do.

When writing your learning intentions, ensure that they are written in language that your child can understand.

Learning intentions are about the what.
