

Teacher resource 2 – Omissions (potential answers for teachers)

Teacher note

Give out the handout at the start of the omissions topic. Play the following <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=rW23RsUTb2Y>.

Is there a duty for you to do anything?

Who would have a duty?

Stephen J stated that:

‘If A sees B drowning and can save her by holding out his hand but abstains from doing so, he has not committed an offence unless a duty situation applies’.

Now research the situations in which a duty will exist if you fail to act and make sure you illustrate each one with a case example:

1.

Contractual: R v Pitwood – D had a duty outlined in his contract to close the railway crossing gate. His failure to do so meant he could be charged with manslaughter.

2.

Voluntary duty: R v Stone and Dobinson – D volunteered to look after his sister. D did not call the medical services when she became sick and they had a duty to do this as they had voluntarily assumed that duty.
