

Little Sparrow

There was a little sparrow
And he was out of work
So he put his bluey on his back
And he set off for Bourke
He walked till he got bunions
Then thought he would enquire
But found that he had only got
As far as Nevertire

He was hungry and so weary
He could hardly drag a leg
When suddenly beside the track
He spied an emu egg
He popped it in his billycan
To boil it for his tea
And while his billy water boiled
He counted minutes three

And when the minutes three were up
He thought it time to stop
So he took his little tomahawk
And he cut off the top
T'was a pity that he boiled it
T'would have been much better fried
For as he stooped to sup it up
He tumbled down inside

And when he fell into the egg
He to his sorrow found
Three minutes wasn't long enough
And the poor little chap got drowned

The moral to this story is – if emu eggs you seek
For supper you should take great care
To boil them for a week

The Complete Poetry of Catullus Catullus,2002-05-20 Catullus life was akin to pulp fiction In Julius Caesar s Rome he engages in a stormy affair with a consul s wife He writes her passionate poems of love hate and jealousy The consul a vehement opponent of Caesar dies under suspicious circumstances The merry widow romances numerous young men Catullus is drawn into politics and becomes a cocky critic of Caesar writing poems that dub Julius a low life pig and a pervert Not surprisingly soon after no more is heard of Catullus David Mulroy brings to life the witty poignant and brutally direct voice of a flesh and blood man a young provincial in the Eternal City reacting to real people and events in a Rome full of violent conflict among individuals marked by genius and megalomaniacal passions Mulroy's lively rhythmic translations of the poems are enhanced by an introduction and commentary that provide biographical and bibliographical information about Catullus a history of his times a discussion of the translations and definitions and notes that ease the way for anyone who is not a Latin scholar
