Tenth Amendment And State Sovereignty Constitutional History And Contemporary Issues:

The Tenth Amendment and State Sovereignty Mark R. Killenbeck, 2001-12-22 In the wake of the 2000 Election the relationship between the Supreme Court and the American states has become more important Once derided by the Court as a truism the Tenth Amendment has in recent years been transformed from a neglected provision into a vital first principle As such it has provided the foundation for a series of decisions in which the Supreme Court has elevated the status of the states often at the expense of federal power and in the face of previously settled assumptions In this important volume four prominent scholars two historians and two law professors examine carefully one of the central tenets in the Court's recent Tenth Amendment jurisprudence the assumption that the results fashioned by a narrow majority are compelled by history and consistent with the intentions of the framers They shed important new light on a series of decisions that mark a major change in our thinking about the nature of a constitutional system within which both the federal government and the states properly regard themselves as sovereign entities

The American Revolution, State Sovereignty, and the American Constitutional Settlement, 1765-1800 Aaron N. Coleman, 2016-03-04 Tracing the political ideological and constitutional arguments from the imperial crisis with Britain and the drafting of the Articles of Confederation to the ratification of the Constitution and the political conflict between Federalists and Jeffersonians The American Revolution State Sovereignty and the American Constitutional Settlement 1765 1800 reveals the largely forgotten importance of state sovereignty to American constitutionalism Contrary to modern popular perceptions and works by other academics the Founding Fathers did not establish a constitutional system based upon a national popular sovereignty nor a powerful national government designed to fulfill a grand philosophical purpose Instead most Americans throughout the period maintained that a constitutional order based upon the sovereignty of states best protected and preserved liberty Enshrining their preference for state sovereignty in Article II of the Articles of Confederation and in the Tenth and Eleventh Amendments to the federal constitution Americans also claimed that state interposition the idea that the states should intervene against any perceived threats to liberty posed by centralization was an established and accepted element of state sovereignty
